“Horace Gyant was one of my favorite cousins. I thought of him as an uncle. He was like a brother to my mother, Edith. I remember growing up hearing my cousin praise God every Sunday during services at Mt Sinai. He would holla, "Thank God for Jesus!" and he meant it. What I loved best about him is he lived his praise. He was the same outside of church as he was inside those holy doors. He was a gentle, loving and kind man full of laughter and a great big smile. He came from humble beginnings but left here a king. He is now sporting his crown. Thank God for Jesus! Thank God for Horace Gyant, an honorable man of God.
